A LOOK BACK AT 25 YEARS:

'State of the City' lauds local progress

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A severe recession may have clipped some wings around West Sacramento recently.

But even if last week's "State of the City" address by Mayor Christopher Cabaldon didn't include a litany of booming new projects in town, it still managed a feel-good look at the city's progress in its first 25 years.

At a dinner hosted by the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce and attended by hundreds, the mayor lauded those who paved the way 25 years ago — those who overcame suspicions between neighborhoods and cast their votes to make this part of "East Yolo" into one city.

And he celebrated the civic improvements that came after those "brash dreams" and that "hard nosed pragmatism" that he said have come to define West Sacramento.

The mayor and city council also passed out several awards at Wednesday's dinner. One was to Mike McGowan, for "pride." McGowan was the city's first mayor back in 1987 and has served it on the Yolo County Board of Supervisors since 1993.

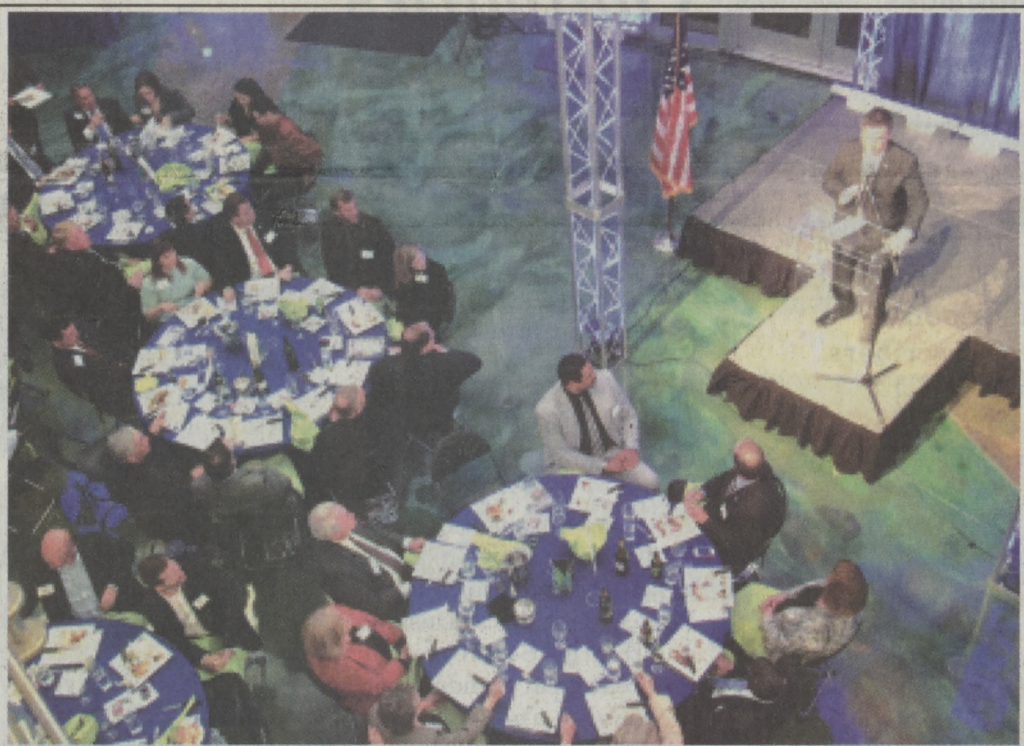

A second award (for "service") went to longtime city manager Toby Ross, soon to retire after presiding over many of the city's most visible improvements and then steering it through an economic downturn.

Also honored were the Farmers Market created by the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce last year (the market returns this May) and some businesspeople from the private sector. Their "Farm Fresh to You" consumer-direct farm product distributor received honors for leadership in the private sector.

Look for more on the State of the City event in next week's News-Ledger.

Next of kin sought after death

A man was hit and killed by a passenger train at about 3:45 p.m. near the Ikea store and Commerce Drive last Wednesday.

Robert LaBrash, Chief Deputy Coroner for Yolo County, said the man has been identified as a 47-year old transient who lived near the site where he was killed. But the man's name was still being withheld because his wife, also a transient believed to be in West Sacramento, has not been located and notified.

The circumstances of the death are still being investigated. Anyone who may have information about the incident or about the man's spouse is invited to call the coroner's office at (530) 668-5292, said LaBrash.

Fireworks sellers

Eight local churches and charities were chosen from among 41 applicants by lottery for a permit to operate a fireworks booth in West Sacramento during this year's Fourth of July season.

For the first time, the city legalized use of "safe and sane" fireworks last year for a limited time during the Independence Day holiday, and authorized eight charities to run booths. The booths earned an average of $12,000 last year, reports the city clerk.

This year's vendors will be Campus Life Connection/Collings Teen Center, American Legion Baseball, Knights of Columbus (Our Lady of Grace), Southport Community Church, Our Lady of Grace School, West Sacramento Historical Society, Youth for Christ Ministries and the West Sacramento Youth Resource Coalition.

Applicants were selected from categories — "youth," "service," "arts, culture & education" or "at large."

The port is located at 2895 Industrial Boulevard at Harbor Boulevard. For more information, call Amy Cameron at the port, 617-4733.

Ship tours

Visitors will be welcome on the Golden Bear — the 500-foot teaching ship of the California Maritime Academy in Vallejo — when the ship visits the Port of West Sacramento on Sunday, April 29.

The vessel will arrive around 1:30 p.m., and free tours will be offered from 2-4 p.m.

Other agencies and community groups will be on hand, including the West Sacramento Fire Department Prevention Trailer, the local police, chamber of commerce, River City Rowing Club, Washington Outboard Club, and the local chapter of the Sea Scouts.

No children on board

Nobody was hurt after a school bus caught fire on a local freeway April 6. West Sacramento firefighters put out the blaze on the Pioneer Bridge (eastbound U.S. 50). No children had been on the Mount Diablo Unified School District bus when the fire broke out.

Confessions of a reluctant mouse-assassin

I was talking to a friend the other day about my hope of taking a little weekend trip this spring out into the Southern California desert, the goal being to spend at least one night sleeping out under a blanket of stars.

"Don't they have rattlesnakes out there?" my friend asked with concern.

"Well," I explained, "I plan on sleeping in the bed of my pickup truck and rattlesnakes are more into slithering than climbing. But if I do use a tent, I've already promised my daughter that I will make sure it's hermetically sealed."

"I hate snakes," said my friend. "The only good thing about them is that they eat mice, which I hate even more than snakes."

"Why is that?" I asked with interest.

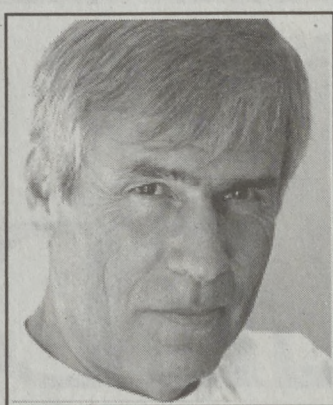

"Well, I guess it started back when I was teaching and the teacher I shared my room with was always leaving boxes of sugary cereal around, which he loved to snack on. So of course it wasn't long before there were mice everywhere, including running back and forth under my desk while I was sitting in it.

"But I have a more recent example for you from just last week. I was sitting very quietly in my living room, no loud and obnoxious reality TV shows on, no music playing in the background, and I had even turned my cell phone off because sometimes I just need to completely decompress after a noisy and much too busy day at the office. Then, with the whole house wonderfully still, all of a sudden I heard the patter of little feet up in the attic.

"My husband was out of town, but men are never there when you need them anyway. I immediately knew what the problem was because we have had it in the past. So I very reluctantly got up off my very comfortable couch and went out into the cold garage in search of some of those newish kind of mouse traps which are very easy to set that my husband had purchased the last time we had mice in the house. When I finally found them, I baited two with some very enticing extra-crunchy peanut butter, which I've been told mice will kill for – or rather be killed for.

"Then, also very reluctantly, off to the attic I went. But having no interest whatsoever in seeing – much less confronting – a live mouse, I slowly shoved the baited traps just inside the attic door and scampered back down the stairs. It wasn't the best night's sleep I've ever had, since no one wants to think of themselves as an assassin, even if it's just vermin you're sending to the other side. So I was in no hurry the next morning to go up to the attic to see how things had turned out. But since I had to get some Easter decorations down from there, I had no choice. And sure enough, there were two squished mice, with their lifeless eyes staring up at me.

"I simply couldn't deal with it at that moment, so I left everything untouched and got ready for work. But once at work, I made the very big mistake of telling a co-worker about my ordeal, only to find out she is a vegetarian, which to her apparently means all vermin should be treated kindly and shooed out of the house with happy wishes. Maybe she thought Cinderella's dress-making was going on in my attic or something, but she was very unhappy with me. Plus she kind of hinted around that I could have at least removed the poor mice from the terrible devices which had killed them and given them a decent burial.

"Anyway, later that night I dressed for the mission. Along with a baseball cap to hold my hair back in a tight ponytail, I put on a leather jacket, my hiking boots, and rubber gloves, the goal being to carefully protect myself against any grieving or angry mouse relatives or friends I might encounter. I also put on sunglasses, even though it was dark out and I was indoors, so that I couldn't see any of the messy details. Unfortunately, I immediately saw details, and one of the dead mice looked suspiciously like a lactating female, which meant I had probably destroyed a perfectly happy family. It also meant that I would probably have to soon return with more traps to snuff out the babies.

"I was beginning to feel like a mass murderer. Plus the hard part was still ahead – getting the corpses out of my attic. I had a shovel with me, but that was mostly in case any other mice tried to rush me. To actually pick up the dead mice, I used two long corn tongs, and the whole time I was doing it, a scream kept building up in the back of my throat. Then I had to get them – and the corn tongs that of course could never be used again – into a plastic bag, which I finally managed to do.

"I triple-bagged everything, raced down the stairs and into the backyard, and dropped the whole awful mess into the garbage can. Then I let out the scream I had been holding inside for fifteen minutes, only to scare the bejesus out of my poor neighbors."

"That's quite a story!" I told my friend, who still appeared to be quite shaken even though the events she had described in such detail had happened over a week ago.

"So," I asked, "have you heard any more mice up in your attic?"

"No, not yet. But my husband thinks we should get a cat."

"Now that's a good idea."

"But I'm allergic to cats. I guess it would probably be okay if the cat was only around for a few days every now and then. Do you know any place that rents cats?"

Congratulations to Stonegate Elementary, the local 2012 boys scholastic basketball champions!

Stonegate was crowned the Washington Unified School District 2012 boys basketball champs after a 47-38 win over Westmore Oaks. As usual, the road wasn't easy!

Stonegate had an overall record of 6-1. Starting players for Stonegate were Richard Horn, Franklin Stowers, Calvin Chavez, Daylen Carter and Adal Rasaphangthong. Alex Yang was the coach.

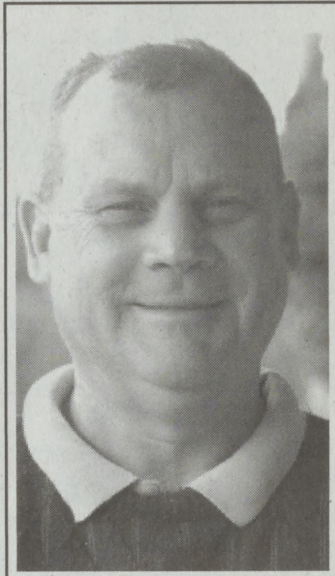

For Westmore Oaks, Nate Barrett had 15 points, Brian Saeteang 12 points, Savion Washington 10 rebounds and 3 points.

For Westmore Oaks, the road was tough just to get to the championship game. Against Southport, Westmore trailed for three quarters but pulled it out in the fourth quarter for a 33-31 win. Westmore standouts included: Nate Barrett 9 points, Jesse Zalasky 15 rebounds. Coaches were Ron Ruaro and Willow Daykin.

Congratulations on another great season.

Something new has been added!

Well, not brand-new, but

BY DON SCHATZEL

United States Youth Volleyball League is up and spiking, thanks to Tammy and Steve Bacon, the River City volleyball coaches.

They run a great program while recognizing that their girls and their league coaches have not had as much volleyball experience as they've had in other sports. Each girl gets her own volleyball and a T shirt uniform. Heck, even us coaches get a shirt!

They have a preseason coaches clinic, and once a week for an hour practice is another coached clinic, with each practice scripted as to what basic skills will be taught that day. Then, Tammy and Steve walk around and help the coaches and players learn the basics. After an hour of practice it is not unusual for the players to comment, "Wow that was fast - we're done already?"

The league has four age groups and game days against Folsom and Elk Grove are on the way! You can see the teams at River City High School on Saturday mornings, over by the tennis courts, spiking and serving away.

Heck, when a challenger for the state championship, Union Mine High School, is in your high school's league, why not start a youth program and catch up? Way to go Tammy and Steve!

Noting, quoting and emoting:

Congratulations to District 6 Little League for submitting a proposal to O.C. Jones Company TLC program and receiving a grant chosen from hundreds of proposals. The grant will help the City and West Sacramento Little League make improvements at Memorial Park, home of West Sacramento Little League.

Congrats to Centennial Rotary Club of West Sacramento and member Tony Schwall for coordinating and sponsoring a Rotary Youth Exchange student from West Sacramento to Chile and hosting a student from Japan. Now, Uvaldo Perez of West Sacramento will be sponsored to go to Austria! Wow, Austria for a year! Cool.

Finally hats off to the River City Girls J.V. and varsity soccer teams. We are all familiar with the extreme cold and rain this past month but these girls are out there in it, practicing every day and play.

If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

Bits & pieces

The mayor's recap of West Sacramento's 25-year history as a city during last week's "State of the City" address brought back some fond memories.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon noted that one of the things that delayed the creation of this city was a level of distrust between its neighborhoods. This distrust was a factor in the failure of a couple of prior attempts to create a city here.

Missing from the mayor's address, though, was any mention of another element that complicated both the 1986 incorporation effort and the early years of West Sacramento: the influence of developers. Property developers hoping to earn a nice living off all that undeveloped real estate here in "East Yolo" joined citizens concerned about crime and the lack of shopping opportunities in campaigning for cityhood in 1986. They won.

And the city eventually made a lot of progress in improving public safety and creating retail shopping.

But the developers and land speculators also got a lot of what they wanted, and had an undue influence over the early West Sacramento city council. Any retrospective on these early years needs to note the city's tension over development issues.

The News-Ledger doesn't know for sure that this is a growing problem. But a look over our "Police Log" in recent weeks seems to show something alarming:

There has been an apparent small rash of home burglaries committed while a resident was home and asleep inside. This kind of brazen break-in has occurred on Buckeye Drive, Fremont Boulevard and Meadow Road. In a couple of cases, the thief has taken car keys along with other things from inside, and then stolen a parked car from outside.

Burglaries of vacant homes are more common. But it's easy to see the potential for something to go horribly wrong when thieves are breaking into a home while somebody is inside.

When West Sacramento planned its West Capitol Avenue streetfront improvements, it needed to buy some small strips of property along edges of some privately-held land. Some property owners negotiated as hard as they could to get the best possible price.

At least one – the "City of Dharma Realm" Buddhist monastery at West Capitol Avenue, simply gave the needed square feet to West Sacramento's taxpayers. That's something you don't see very often.

So it's especially painful to see that the institution has been plagued by a lengthy series of petty crimes and break-ins. Let's all keep an eye out for them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Help a child

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month. It only takes a minute to make a difference in a child's life. It only takes a minute to:

- Believe in a child;
- To listen to a child;
- To hug a child;
- To realize words hurt;
- To talk to a child, and not yell;
- To stop a child from being hurt; or to
- Prevent child abuse.

Unfortunately, the most recent annual statistics from the Yolo County Department of Employment and Social Services show Child Welfare Services, received 1,325 reports of suspected child abuse and/or neglect. During the same year, Yolo County had approximately 263 children in child-welfare supervised placements.

Finally, in Yolo County approximately 100 children each month continue living with their families while the families receive ongoing support services and supervision through the Child Welfare Services Family Maintenance Program. It is well worth our time as parents, grandparents and members of the community to "take a minute" to make a difference in a child's life. Scientific studies confirm a direct link between child abuse and a significantly greater risk later in life for divorce, substance abuse, crime, suicide and premature death from cancer and other serious illnesses.

I hope everyone reading this will "take a minute" and think about what you might do to make the children in your life feel more loved and valued. Then, take another minute to show those same children just how important they are to you.

I can't think of a more gratifying way to spend a minute. Can you?

DON SAYLOR

cunning madams and thirsty German beer-garden lovers who rose up en masse when he tried to close saloons on Sunday. Just as fascinating are the colorful, often outrageous characters featured in the narrative. For example, Rev. Charles Parkhurst, the minister of Madison Square Presbyterian Church, after being accused of knowing too little about vice, put on a disguise and personally toured some of the city's more notorious dens, including brothels, saloons and even a transvestite club. Author Richard Zacks has written a witty, richly detailed account of one of America's most colorful politicians and his attempt to clean up the seedy underbelly of New York City.

If this story had a moral it would be a simple one, namely never try to take a beer away from a New Yorker.
